

Blood donation

Our high school organizes a blood donation every year. The blood donation starts at 4 pm until 10 pm. So we started splitting the work and decided to receive 5 people per hour. One student was welcoming the people at the school gate and another one was giving them a permission form to be filled. Another student was in the waiting room with the people who were expecting to give blood while they were watching the project's progress. The last one was giving a gift and some food to the people who had finished the donation.

We advertised the blood donation by making some posters that we spread throughout the city. We also sent a digital poster to the social media and we recorded an audio in the local radio station, we also sent the ad to the newspapers and they published it.

We worked like a team because when a student wasn't doing anything s/he helped the other groups, for example the ones attending the people donating blood or the other roles.

It's important to plan ahead to have everything ready on time. For example in our case, the gifts we wanted to give to donors were 3D printer keyrings and the printer broke the day before so we didn't have enough for everyone, so if we had planned ahead we would have had a plan B for the gift for example a thread keyring as an alternative.

This is one of the posters that we made.

The translation of the slogan into English is:
A drop of blood is a heartbeat of life.
